

Coalition America teams with American Health Data Institute to offer utilization management services

Atlanta, GA, April 26, 2006 Coalition America, Inc. (CAI) is pleased to announce its partnership with American Health Data Institute (AHDl), an industry leader in data warehousing and utilization management services.

“Experts acknowledge that rising healthcare costs remain with us today in part due to the continued wide variations in efficiency and quality of care rendered by all types of providers. 80% of an employer’s healthcare costs are driven by the 20% of the population with chronic illnesses. It’s all about managing the most efficient and effective utilization of health services”, said Nancy Blough, JD, MBA, executive vice president, AHDl. “AHDl combines all the necessary elements for controlling healthcare costs from both the demand and supply side of the healthcare equation.”

“We believe AHDl can give CAI clients the ability to enhance risk management by accurately forecasting and budgeting for future healthcare costs”, said CAI president, Scott Smith. “Our focus is working with partners who share our commitment to customer satisfaction, product excellence, and service. AHDl has shown themselves to be an excellent partner to meet our goals,” said Smith.
